STATE HOUSE NEWS.

Tales of Convicts About the Management of the Prison.

Railroad Commissioners Eddy, Macdonald and Wagner were in session today.

Thos. F. Ryan of Oregon City and Alfred E. Maltby of Oakland were commissioned notary today.

Wm. Mosier of Grant county, a convict who was committed today after serving about four years, gives interesting accounts of his experiences at the pen besides admitting that he was guilty. He claims he was robbed before leaving the pen, claims the prices of groceries are inordinately high, and no market quotations permitted inside the pen. He tells the usual stories of cruelty to others, but says he was never punished himself because he kept all the rules. As a general thing, a newspaper cannot pay much attention to tales of woe from convicts, but Mr. Mosier seems quite intelligent and gentlemanly.

PLEA FOR PARDON.

Joseph Sedgman, who is serving a six-year sentence in the penitentiary for the crime of forgery, has asked for executive clemency, and has one of the strongest recommendations from Superintendent Gilbert ever sent up by the prison superintendent in behalf of a prisoner. Superintendent Gilbert says:

"It has been fully understood by both myself and the wardens of the prison that the crime for which this man is being punished was committed as a final ending of two weeks drinking and debauchery. No person lost a cent, nor did any injury fall on any person. The act was not that of a man who was doing it for gain, but rather of one who had lost his head and knew nothing of the consequences. He was admitted to the prison February 26, 1895, and made a trusty September 16, 1895, and will be regularly discharged May 26, 1898. His services to the state as carpenter have been of a most valuable character. He has in the two years superintended and directed the building of barns, dunes, head-gates and fences, and in his shop during the rainy season he has made for the use of the prison, tables, desks, commodes and closets, all of the most modern style and workmanship. To such prisoners as this one, the help of executive clemency ought to be extended. The man has no friends to intercede, no lawyer to plead, but his faithful services to the state and the position of trust he has held entitles him to respect, reward and recognition. I would therefore recommend that his sentence be commuted to expire November 15, 1897, with the restoration to citizenship, and do this with the utmost confidence that the man will renew his citizenship, becoming again a useful and industrious man."

The commutation will probably be granted.
